I'm trying to run this query: $query = "SELECT * FROM entries "; $query.= "WHERE `status`='Processing' AND `id`=$id AND `department`='$department'"; $result = mysql_query($query) or die('Error: '. mysql_error()); $row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result); I want to get all of the "id" values from that result, but I can't get it to work. It's like the "id" column is coming as a string, so I can't simply access it with $row['id'] like it is in a normal array. I also can't get it to work with a foreach loop. How do I get this? A: $result->fetchAll(); fetchAll() fetches all rows and puts them in an array in $result. A: I would use fetch_assoc() and its keys like so: $result = mysql_query($query); $row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result); $ids = $row['id']; A: You need to fetch the data from mysql $row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result); $ids = $row['id']; And if you want all the rows you would use this $result = mysql_query($query); while ($row = mysql_fetch_assoc($result)){ $ids[] = $row['id']; } As Steve Grissom said, use fetch_all() Q: How to represent a dimension of the vector space as a set of vectors? I have a vector space $V$
