A microsoft word macro that can create multiple graphs from multiple excel files and add it into a single excel file. In every project we make there has to be at least one graphical representation of various items to quickly describe the profit growth or a country's trend. However, not all have the necessary skills and knowledge to design complex charts using Microsoft Excel. That's why various people developed more basic programs to help those less experienced to make graphs effortlessly. Make multiple graphs using a clear-cut layout Magico Chart is a user-friendly and accessible application that comes packed only with the basic elements to create your own charts easily using different styles to add a touch of personality to your work. The setup is swift and uneventful, while the offered interface is intuitive yet outdated. The options are in plain sight and easy to access, and the window comes with three distinct chart types (icon, scene, flag), a more in-depth selection, the value table, a diagram size slider, as well as a visual representation of the data. Pick the preferred style and save your result To get started, first, choose the desired mode from the three, the keywords (e.g. animal, building, people, transport, plant), title, column count and the values for each record. Plus, you can import an XLS file from the computer. Keep in mind that every time you change something, you have to hit the "make and preview" button for the modifications to take place. The chart size can be easily adjusted by dragging the slider to the desired dimension. The data may be exported to Microsoft Excel Spreadsheet or saved as a BMP image and inserted in your projects. Unfortunately, the panel can't be resized or maximized for a better view and the provided functions leave much to be desired. On an ending note Taking everything into account, Magico Chart is a useful and straightforward program that comes in handy only for children or adults with a great sense of humor to generate childish and entertaining charts by choosing the model and entering the values into the table.
