References Category:MAMEQ: How to get rid of the borders around the selected text in a TextView? I have a ListView in my application which has some rows. Each row can have one TextView with multiline text in it. When I click an item from the list, the currently selected item text should be highlighted, also the borders surrounding the selected text should be filled with a dark color. I have managed to make it work by using the following attributes: android:ellipsize="marquee" android:focusable="true" android:focusableInTouchMode="true" It works OK, but looks ugly, like the selected text is in a frame. When I use the following attributes, which are also taken from this website, I don't see the selection, but the borders are filled, but with the default text color: android:singleLine="true" android:singleLine="false" android:singleLine="true" In addition to this, the third attribute gives me an error "The attribute app:singleLine is only allowed for TextViews in the Android 2.1 (API level 7) 3da54e8ca3
