Adobe Photoshop CS3 is part of the Adobe Creative Suite 3. Included in the suite are Adobe® Bridge™ CS3, Adobe® Photoshop® CS3 and Adobe® Photoshop® CS3 Extended. It's not only a great graphic design tool, but also a video editing tool, animation tool and even a photo cropping tool. With Photoshop, you can easily create gorgeous designs as well as manipulate them in amazing ways. You can not only alter photos, but you can also manipulate video, create animations and even edit photos. It's one of the very few tools that brings so many things under one umbrella. Let's go through the main features of Photoshop and get you started right away. Geometric Expressions Geometric expressions enable you to insert an object into your design and manipulate it. With these tools, you can create a stroke effect, bevel, drop shadow, marquee, and more. The Geometric Expression menu enables you to use a group to bevel, create a stroke effect or manipulate a pixel of your creation. The Pathfinder tool has many useful geometric expressions. You can create an arc, a circle, a line, and more. The Geometric Expressions tools allow you to have precise control over your design. You can even use the grid system, which is not one that is included in Photoshop but does allow you to create your design with an inch grid. Photoshop has this style of Design Element called the Grid. You can lay out your design in a grid and place objects with any type of layout that you choose. Then, you can go into the place the items and create a geometric expression, like a circle or line, or create an arc. In Photoshop, you can make this setting called the Match Points. It's where you can turn off the grid or turn it on. You can then click anywhere on the picture and click on a spot on the canvas and the object will make its way to that spot. You can use this tool and the Photoshop tools to create amazing designs that no one would expect. Included in Photoshop CS3 The Photoshop has a few tools included with the software such as the Magic Wand tool. The Magic Wand tool allows you to select any type of edge and the color will change to a color that is the approximate color of the edge. The Magic Wand tool is very useful and many times makes selections easier than the Lasso tool.

Poverty defines neighborhoods, public services and health, and research suggests that people in poor neighborhoods grow up to become poor adults. Now psychologists are watching to see whether a neighborhood's economic, educational, and psychological resources translate into a neighborhood's developmental trajectory. Much of the research is observational and cross-sectional, which prevents researchers from learning whether resources and outcomes are related over time. In order to learn more about the long-term influences of neighborhood resources on neighborhood outcomes, researchers at Duke University's Fuqua School of Business and City University of New York's Hunter College have been studying the transition from early childhood to adolescence. Researcher Wayne Lawrence and his colleagues have found that the quality of school and family resources of low-income, primarily African American and Latino children in Brooklyn correlate with the quality of family and school resources into early adolescence. Those children, according to Lawrence, are likely to spend their adult lives in low-income, neighborhood environments. "Public school performance is the most important education predictor of future poverty, earnings, and occupational attainment," says Lawrence. "In our study, we found that some very basic, proximal influences on school success in early childhood such as school breakfast program participation, tutoring, parental education, family income, are significantly related to later outcomes. The most robust associations were with investments in school breakfast programs and parental education. Those children's families tend to have better school experiences and later achieve levels of education and income on par with richer families." The researchers focused on the experiences of kids who were born in one of the poorest neighborhoods in Brooklyn, a neighborhood dubbed "Brownstonerood." Although the population is predominantly African American and Hispanic, Brownstonerood is ethnically and economically diverse. Around 25 percent of the children in Brownstonerood live in poverty, and the neighborhood ranks seventh-worst in New York City in terms of per-capita income. The researchers collected data on the socioeconomic and economic environments of Brownstonerood kids, from birth to age 12. When the children were 12 years old, the researchers studied the neighborhood's academic achievement. If families in Brownstonerood did not have a computer, the researchers helped with the purchase. Many families in the neighborhood did not have a computer or Internet access at home. Researchers also asked parents and teachers to provide information about the kids' family education, family income, and school experiences. In addition to basic program data, the researchers also collected data on family income from birth to age 12.

Q: Finding matching values in a list using value_count_by (or by similar methods) I have a list of values with the following properties [5, 'a', 'a', 'b', 2.12] I am trying to find the exact number of times each of those items occurs, for example: [5, 'a', 'a', 'b', 2.12] 5 a a b 2.12 I was thinking that using value_count_by might be helpful, but I'm not sure how to write it. For example [5, 'a', 'a', 'b', 2.12] list_values.value_count_by(lambda (v,*args): v) would not work. Thank you in advance for any help you can provide! A: from collections import Counter def get_count(lst): return Counter(lst) [5, 'a', 'a', 'b', 2.12] # Counter({'a': 2, 'b': 2, '5': 1}) get_count([1, 'a', 'b']) # Counter({'a': 2, 'b': 2}) [5, 'a', 'a', 'b', 2.12] # Counter({'a': 3, 'b': 2, '2.12': 1}) Q: Extracting the POSTed file from a Rest call I am writing a small rest client for a Cloud service that utilizes CORS (Cross origin resource sharing) in the post data, but I am having trouble finding documentation on how to extract the uploaded data on the server side. For example, I'm POSTing a file like this: POST /rest/v1/image HTTP/1.1 Host: [REDACTED] Content-Type: multipart/form-data; boundary=VVVVVVVVVVVVVVVVVV ---... Content-Type: application/json; charset=utf-8 Content-Disposition: form-data; name="image" Content-Length: 141246 {"width": 1000, "height": 800, "mimetype":
