Cloning of a mouse homolog of the Drosophila engrailed gene. We report the cloning of a Drosophila homeobox gene engrailed (en) of which loss of function results in a homeotic transformation of mesoderm into the ectoderm. In Drosophila, en is expressed in a ring of cells surrounding the mesoderm germ layer and regulates the specification of these cells along the anterior/posterior (A/P) axis. We identified a mouse homolog of the en gene, designated emx, that is expressed in the ventricular zone of mouse midbrain. emx expression was found to be inhibited by Sonic hedgehog (Shh), a signaling molecule that regulates the A/P axis and that is known to have a role in the specification of the midbrain/hindbrain boundary. These results suggest that emx is a regulatory gene of the Shh signaling pathway during ventral patterning of the midbrain/hindbrain boundary.BBC News - America vows to deploy more troops for fight The US government has promised to deploy its most wanted man in pursuit of the al-Qaeda leader.
